

Adrian Jugdoyal

I am currently a lecturer at the University of West London within the Post Qualifying Team, he leads on Clinical Assessments and Clinical Reasoning and is active in teaching Non-Medical prescribing. He is a dual qualified Adult and Mental Health Nurse as well as an established independent nurse prescriber. I have worked in many clinical areas including an Advanced Nurse Practitioner within acute medicine, specialist medicine, accident and emergency and substance misuse settings and was the Lead Nurse for hepatology and alcohol services within a trust in London.

I am also a specialist advisor for the CQC for both acute hospitals and addiction centres as well as on and was on the expert panel for 2017 update Alcohol use disorders clinical guideline in which guidance for Alcoholic Hepatitis was updated. As well as with working with Public Health England with regards to screening and providing minimal data sets for hospital related admissions for alcohol and alcoholic hepatitis

I have also been involved with the James Lind Institute and the National Institute for Health Research for priority setting for the management of liver disease.